The Index of Sections

Previously, we created a Performance Contract and are almost ready to start populating the agreement's first review period with performance objectives for the year.

Before we start, let's briefly check the layout of the screen and the functionalities available.

The index of sections indicate the sections of the agreement apply to you and their relative importance as a percentage. The Key Performance Areas section is always a part of an agreement, but Stretch Targets, Values & Behaviours, Leadership Behaviours, and Key Competencies might not be. These sections depend on various settings and whether you are a manager.

GENERAL COMMENTS

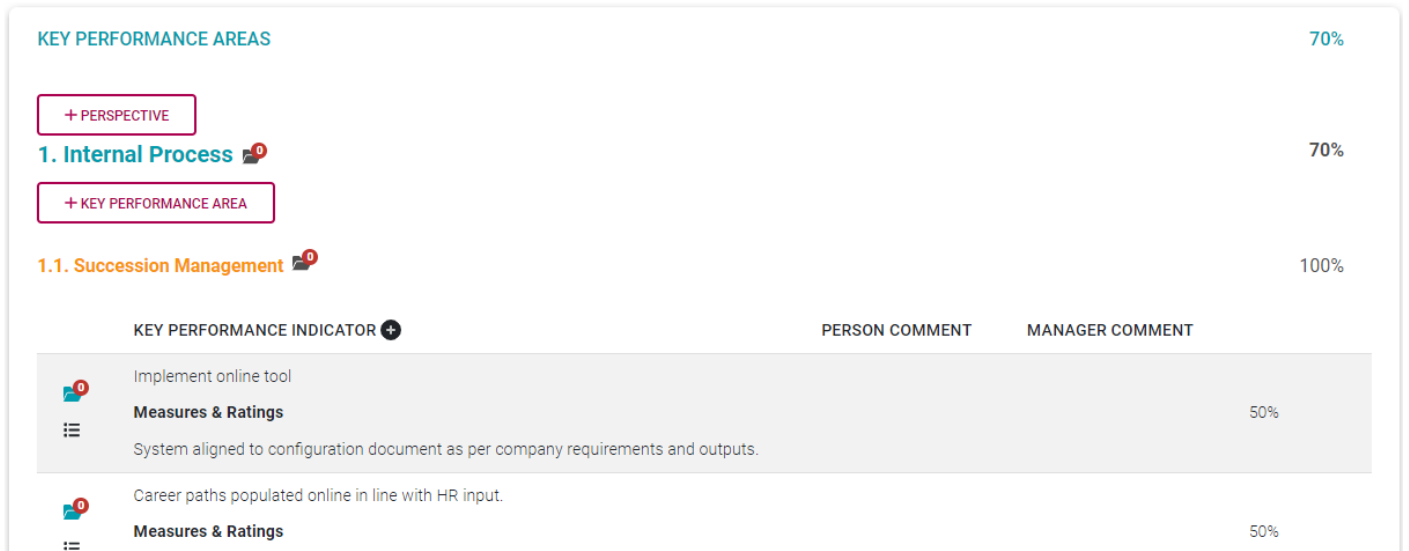

What goes into each section?

We will briefly tour each section to understand its native/original intention but note that you can rename any section to fit your purpose. The renaming of a section might completely change its purpose.

Key Performance Areas

The KPA section is used to identify the areas within the business that a person is responsible, e.g., Process Improvement, Safety and Health, Security, etc., and how they relate to company strategies or focus areas - called perspectives or pillars.

This section contains up to three levels of information. The Perspectives level is sometimes omitted and is dependent on client configuration.

- Perspectives
- Key Performance Areas
- Key Performance Indicators

Note the action buttons:

The other sections have a layout similar to, or simpler than the Key Performance Areas shown below. Some unfamiliar terminology might be used in these sections. Refer to the Glossary for a brief explanation of each.

Stretch Targets

The Stretch Targets section works the same as the Key Performance Areas section, but the fact that it is a separate section implies a separate overall purpose.

It is usually reserved for senior management where 'stretch' targets are present on Performance Contracts. Alternatively, you can change the section's name if you would like to use this section for a completely different purpose.
