

Working with the PDP

Discussion: Employee View

What is the purpose of the process?

The PDP discussion provides the opportunity for an employee and their Supervisor and/or PDP Practitioner to discuss their training requirements.

- These requirements aim to help the employee to be successful in their current job and to grow within that role. This means that the discussion facilitates and starts the process of closing existing skills gaps that an employee currently has.
- The PDP Discussion will also cover performance-related training that has been identified through the Performance Appraisal process. This training is compulsory and must address performance-related issues where a lack of skills is hampering desired performance levels.
- Lastly, the discussion helps to identify training required for the employees' current role, and gives sight to an employee of their career path possibilities.

When will these discussions take place?

PDP Discussions are held within the financial period of the business. This means that it now has a specific start date and end date that fall in a closed period.

This closed period runs concurrently with the financial year of the business.

The PDP First approver and PDP Practitioner will thus within this period have the opportunity to conduct at least one but a maximum of three discussions with employees.

Who are the role-players involved in the PDP Discussion process?

There are 3 role-players involved in this process, namely:

- The Employee
- The PDP Practitioner
- The PDP First Approver

How do editing rights work in the system-based process?

It is important to note that the Supervisor and PDP Practitioner are the only people who are able to access and edit the PDP Discussion information, once a PDP has been completed and approved it can no longer be edit.

An employee will only have access to the reports generated once a discussion has been approved and the Signed PDP report uploaded.
